A FEW WORDS FROM YOURS TRULY

It's been a very different – and strange – year.

Whether or not 2020 will be the worst year ever – well, only time and the course of history will definitely determine that. But at least, the present year's about to end – certainly the events of the last few weeks give us hope that 2021 (and beyond that) will be somewhat better. At least, that's the hope – and hope's one commodity that we need more of.

Of course, we should also count our blessings – and be relieved that the world that we live in didn't come to an end this year. Considering what all of us had to deal with in 2020 – and the problems that we've faced aren't going away immediately – we should be grateful that nobody suggested mass genocide as the ultimate solution. (And anyone who actually thinks that is already a candidate for both a strait-jacket and a padded cell.)

As the Christmas holiday season (and 2021) fast approaches, I can only hope that in addition to the peace and goodwill towards all, we also have the courage and wisdom needed to help change things for the better (including bringing about an permanent end to the Reality TV genre, which has already worn out its welcome as far as I'm concerned).

Happy Holidays – and Happy New Year – to all of you.
